A stimulating and challenging one-day event hosted by the Sustainable Lifestyles Research Group (SLRG) featuring presentations from the SLRG team on the findings of their research.

Speakers include

Kate Burningham | Senior Lecturer in Sociology of the Environment

Ian Christie | Research Coordinator, SLRG

Helga Dittmar (invited guest speaker) | Reader in Psychology, University of Sussex

Tim Jackson | Director, SLRG and author of Prosperity without Growth: economics for a finite planet

Andy Stirling | Professor of Science and Technology Policy, University of Sussex

Bas Verplanken | Professor of Social Psychology, University of Bath

Building on over a decade of research, the Sustainable Lifestyles Research Group (SLRG) has been developing new understandings of the processes which lead to changes in people's lifestyles, behaviours and practices. This one day event aims to synthesise the lessons from our ground-breaking work and offer evidence-based advice to policy-makers hoping to build and nurture more sustainable ways of living. Featuring plenary presentations from the SLRG team and panel discussions with invited experts, the day will offer participants the opportunity of an in-depth understanding of our key findings and a lively debate about the challenges ahead.

SLRG is a multi-disciplinary research collaboration between the Universities of Surrey, Sussex, Bath and Edinburgh and the Institute for Fiscal Studies in London. Core funding has been provided jointly by the Department for the Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (DEFRA), the Economic and Social Research Council (ESRC) and the Scottish Government.
